Creativity: A Journey from Chaos to Dancing Stars

Workshop leader Kathleen Hudson

November 5, 2011
9:00 am - 2:00 pm
Cailloux Student Center
Schreiner University Campus

Nietzsche said, "Chaos gives birth to dancing stars."

Kathleen Hudson, Ph.D., leads this workshop, which includes exposure to theories of creativity and experience with various practices of creativity.

Each participant will have the chance to engage in the creative process in a distinct, personalized way. Practices include found art, writing, collage, reflection, dramatic response, poetic response, and original response. Come prepared to play and to "dance"!

Kathleen Hudson, Ph.D., teaches in the English Department at Schreiner University and is director of the Texas Heritage Music Foundation. A 2010 Piper Professor recipient, she has two books published on Texas music with University of Texas Press: Telling Stories, Writing Songs: An Album of Texas Songwriters(2001); and Women in Texas Music: Stories and Songs (2007). As a member of the Center For Innovative Learning at Schreiner, she produces a Texas Writers Conference, a Texas Music Coffeehouse Series, a Texas Heritage Music Day, and a workshop using Native American wisdom. She is available for workshops and presentations.

Supplies needed: a package of colored markers or pens, a couple of magazines to tear up for visuals, and a small notebook for reflection.
